ELECTORAL BOUNDARIES COMMISSION 1988

FINAL REPORT

The Electoral Boundaries Commission Act 1988 set up an Electoral Boundaries Commission charged with the responsibility of reviewing, and where necessary, changing the boundaries of constituencies in Saskatchewan. As an essential element in the review of constituency boundaries, the Commission was required to produce an interim report and to hold at least two hearings, one of which was to be held in Regina or Saskatoon and one at a place other than Regina or Saskatoon, for the purpose of considering oral or written representations with respect to its Interim Report. Pursuant to Section 10 of the Act, the Commission caused to be published in the Saskatchewan Gazette and in the daily newspapers published in Moose Jaw, Regina, Prince Albert and Saskatoon, the notices and maps as required. The Interim Report was made public on August 4, 1988.

As stated in the Interim Report, the Commission after a study of all factors relevant to the review of constituency boundaries, concluded there was no basis for any wholesale change in the boundaries of rural constituencies or for any change in the boundaries of the northern constituencies. Having reached that conclusion, the Commission felt it was necessary that the public of Saskatchewan be afforded the opportunity to make representations relating not only to the boundaries of constituencies that may have been recommended for change but also in respect to those not proposed for change. A notice published in the Gazette and the daily newspapers of the province set out the dates and times for such hearings to be held at Swift Current, Yorkton, Regina, Saskatoon and Prince Albert. In order to be certain of province-wide notice of these hearings, the Commission arranged for a notice of the meetings together with a map of all proposed provincial constituencies to be published in every weekly newspaper in Saskatchewan.

The Commission both in making its Interim Report and in reviewing and assessing the representations made to it at the public hearings, carried out the duties imposed upon it by the Act in accordance with the principles set out therein. The Commission was bound by the provisions of the Act and had only those rights and duties specifically granted therein or which might reasonably be inferred from the legislation.

Section 20 of the Act sets out the rules for fixing constituency boundaries. The guiding factor in determining the voter population is the "constituency population quotient". This is determined by dividing the total voter population as determined from the voters' lists prepared for use in the immediately preceding provincial election, by the number of constituencies established by the Act, namely sixty-six. Applying this formula, the Commission found the "voter population quotient" to be 10,147.

Section 20 further provides that no southern constituency population shall vary from the determined voter population quotient by more than 25%. The variations permitted in the northern constituences was 50%. The provincial constituency population quotient having been determined at 10,147, the upper parameters and the lower parameters for northern constituencies are 15,221 and 5,074, and for southern constituencies 12,684 and 7,610.

The Section then goes on to state that the Commission may use the allowable variation from the voter population quotient to accommodate

(i) the sparsity, density or relative rate of growth of population of any proposed constituency;

(ii) any special geographic features, including size and means of communication between the various parts of the proposed constituency;

(iii) the community or diversity of interests of the population, including variations in the requirements of the population of any proposed constituency; and

(iv) other similar or relevant factors.

The Electoral Boundaries Commission Act provided that no person shall be heard at any of the hearings who failed to give reasonable notice in writing to the Commission, stating the name and address of the person by whom representation is sought to be made, and indicating concisely the nature of the representation and of the interest of that person. This provision was set out in the notice respecting the proposed hearings as required by Section 10 of the Act.

A total of 34 persons gave the required notice and a concise statement of the representations to be made. Of this total, 24 appeared in person at one or the other of the hearings. In addition, there were 10 who rested their representations on the written statement. All of the written submissions were perused by members of the Commission. Those who in such submissions raised issues which were not in the ambit of the Commission's powers, or raised the question of the validity of the Act, were advised the Commission had no right to consider such representations or to comment thereon. At the opening of each hearing, the Commission repeated this direction and asked those making representations to comply therewith.

With few exceptions, those making representations recognized the limited rights of the Commission and made their representations in those areas for which the Commission had responsibility. Such representations primarily related to particular constituency boundaries and to the names of constituencies. Those who raised issues other than those which the Commission was empowered to consider, contended that the adoption of a 25% variance was a denial of the principle of representation by population.

While the Commission had already set out the limitations to which it is subject in considering representations made respecting its Interim Report, it does feel it has a duty to make clear the principles upon which it has proceeded. This includes its interpretation of the legislation governing its actions.

In the opinion of the Commission, the principle of representation by population is recognized in the legislation by the establishment of a constituency voter population quotient. Clearly the Act by necessary inference implies that such voter population quotient must be the benchmark for all constituencies. The right of the Commission to depart from that quotient is not an absolute one. It is entitled to depart therefrom only for the reasons set forth in the Act and only to the extent that the special circumstances properly permit, and the legislation requires. This was the interpretation followed by the Commission in submitting its Interim Report and in reviewing the representations made whether written or oral, in respect to that Report.

The Commission feels that it is not without significance that the federal legislation respecting federal constituency boundaries and the legislation of a majority of the provinces provides for the establishment of a constituency quotient or quota from which there may be a variance of 25%.

As well, in all the legislation there are provisions establishing the conditions which justify departure from the norm. Again it is significant that such conditions in the federal legislation and in the legislation of most provinces are, for all practical purposes, similar to the legislation in Saskatchewan. Because of the legislative establishment of three categories of constituencies: northern, rural and urban, substantially different conditions prevail in the determination of the respective constituency boundaries.

In the Commission's view, the legislative provisions in the various jurisdictions make it clear that it was not intended that the application of the principle of representation by population should be mathematically precise. Whether or not this purpose has been achieved cannot be judged solely by mathematical comparison. Full consideration must also be given to the many other considerations which justify departure from the constituency population quotient. This is necessary to provide not only for representation by population but also to establish effective representation.

Since the Act provides for three categories of constituencies, the Commission thought it advisable to consider each category separately. Such consideration is beneficial since in the case of both the northern and urban constituencies, the Commission is limited by specific restrictions respecting the outer boundaries of such proposed constituencies.

Northern Constituencies:

The dividing line which divides the province into a northern area and a southern area is described in the schedule to the Act and is the same as that described in the Act under which the revision of 1979-80 was made. As stated in the Interim Report, the Commission found no basis to justify any change in the boundaries of the northern constituencies. As well, no representations were made requesting any change. Under these circumstances, the Commission confirms its recommendation made in the Interim Report that the present boundaries be maintained as the boundaries of the two constituencies and the names continue as they are. The voter population of each northern constituency is consistent with the parameters set out in Section 20 of the Act.

Urban Constituencies:

The legislation provides that the City of North Battleford and the Town of Battleford taken together and the cities of Swift Current and Yorkton shall each be proposed as a constituency, the boundaries of which shall not extend beyond the limits of the municipality or municipalities of which it is a part. The Commission proposes that there be the constituency of The Battlefords, Swift Current and Yorkton as required by the Act. In so doing, the proposal respecting The Battlefords removes therefrom all that portion of Section 28, in Township 43, in Range 16, west of the 3rd Meridian, lying beyond the municipal limits. The mental hospital is located on this land which under the present proposal, would be in the proposed constituency of Cut Knife-Lloydminster. The Commission therefore recommends that, in considering this report, the Legislative Assembly give consideration to amending the boundaries of the proposed constituency of The Battlefords by including such area, or alternatively by extending the boundaries of the municipality or municipalities to include such area.

No change is recommended for the proposed constituency of Swift Current as its borders now are the same as its municipal boundaries.

In proposing a constituency of Yorkton with boundaries the same as its municipal boundaries, the Commission had to allot to some other constituency four polls containing 829 voters which were beyond the boundaries of the city. In the Interim Report, the Commission recommended that the same be included in the constituency of Canora. After hearing the representations made at Yorkton, the Commission believes such polls should find their resting place in the constituency of Pelly and so recommends. Such action will require a change in the boundaries of the constituencies of Canora and Pelly as these are set out in the Interim Report.

In the case of the two proposed constituencies within the municipal limits of the City of Prince Albert, no change in the recommendation of the Interim Report appears justified. It was suggested that the dividing line dividing the City of Prince Albert into two constituencies should be north and south rather than as recommended: east and west. Clearly, the population growth in Prince Albert will occur in the eastern section. Under the east-west division recommended, any population increase will see the populations of the proposed constituencies remain relatively equal. In a north-south division, a proposed eastern constituency would quickly become much too populous. The Commission, therefore, reaffirms the recommendations respecting proposed constituences in Prince Albert made in the Interim Report.

The Commission could see no reason to alter the recommendations it made respecting the constituencies within the municipal limits of the City of Moose Jaw. While arguments were advanced for a north-south division, in the opinion of the Commission the east-west division does better meet the requirements for a reasonably close relationship in the population of the two proposed constituencies. As well, the recommended dividing line is geographically preferable to one running north-south and better meets the community of interest of the people in the two constituencies. The Commission, therefore, confirms its recommendation as set out in the Interim Report apart from the proposed name "Moose Jaw Hillcrest" given to one of the constituencies. The Commission recommends that the constituency be named "Moose Jaw Palliser".

As already stated, the Act requires the Commission to make provision for 11 constituencies within the municipal limits of the City of Regina. This the Commission did in its Interim Report. Suggestions for changes in boundaries of some of the constituencies were made at the public hearings. While a number of these suggestions when viewed entirely from the independent constituency viewpoint had some merit, the Commission was compelled to analyze and evaluate such suggestions in an overall study of what effect individual changes would have on the remaining constituencies. After having done so, the Commission decided that the suggested changes, if effected, would fail to result in the betterment of the majority of the proposed constituencies and therefore should not be adopted. The Commission thus reaffirms the recommendations made respecting the Regina constituencies in the Interim Report, apart from changes of names which were requested and with which the Commission agrees. The Commission recommends the following changes in the names as proposed in the Interim Report, namely:

Regina Glencairn to Regina Dewdney;
Regina Lakeview to Regina Lake Centre;
Regina North Albert to Regina Albert North;
Regina South Albert to Regina Albert South;
Regina Plainsview to Regina Wascana Plains;
Regina Sherwood to Regina Normanview

The Commission studied carefully the suggestions made respecting changes to the boundaries in the 11 constituencies proposed within the municipal boundaries of the City of Saskatoon. To adopt the suggested changes would serve only to disturb the boundaries recommended in the Interim Report with no apparent resultant improvement. As the population of the city is split almost equally by the river, it follows that to draw boundaries for 11 constituencies means that at least one constituency must be athwart the river. Thus, in the Commission's view, the boundaries for the 11 constituencies proposed in the Interim Report best serve the principles of the Act. Such recommendations are therefore affirmed subject to the following changes of names to two of the proposed constituencies, namely:

Saskatoon Eastivew to Saskatoon Haultain;
Saskatoon Sutherland to Saskatoon Sutherland-University.

Rural Constituencies:

As pointed out in the Interim Report, the changes required in the boundaries of rural constituencies were primarily required due to the need to locate in such constituencies those areas beyond the municipal boundaries of the cities of Prince Albert, Regina and Yorkton which had formerly been part of the urban constituency in these cities. To meet this requirement, the Commission in its Interim Report recommended changes in the boundaries of the constituencies of Redberry, Rosthern, Biggar, Shellbrook-Torch River, Humboldt and Canora.

At the public hearings there were no requests made for major changes in the boundaries of rural constituencies. There were some criticisms offered, however, respecting the variance in population in one or two of the proposed constituencies.

Elected officials of Rural Municipalities Nos. 461 and 463 sought some changes in those proposed boundaries in the area that was formally the rural part of the constituency of Prince Albert-Duck Lake, which the Commission in its Interim Report had placed in the constituency of Redberry. Because rural municipal boundaries are not as clearly defined as are provincial highways and such natural boundaries as rivers, the Commission was not able to meet these requests in their entirety. The Commission did, however, attempt to give effect to apparent community of interest and also to relative population levels. The Commission therefore recommends that the area lying east of Highway No. 2 connecting St. Louis and Prince Albert lying between the North and South Saskatchewan Rivers now in the constituency of Redberry, be included in the constituency of Kinistino.

The Commission further recommends that suggestions put forward at public meetings regarding the southern boundary of the constituency of Kinistino be adopted, namely that the Town of Vonda and the area lying north of Highway No. 5 east of the South Saskatchewan River now in the Humboldt constituency, also be included in the constituency of Kinistino.

To give effect to these changes will require changes in the boundaries of Redberry, Kinistino and Humboldt constituencies as these are set out in the Interim Report.

The two proposed constituencies to which criticism was primarily directed were those of Morse and Humboldt. Morse has the smallest voter population of any rural constituency and Humboldt has the largest. This is understandable. Morse lies in that area of rural Saskatchewan where there is a sparsity of population whereas Humboldt encompasses an area of the province in which there is a much denser population.

The Commission sees no benefit to be gained by altering the boundaries of Morse constituency. A study of the map will show that the adjoining constituencies are also sparsely settled areas. To add voters to the proposed constituency of Morse would only reduce the voter population in the surrounding constituencies for no beneficial purpose. As well, the northern boundary of the Morse constituency is the South Saskatchewan River, a true natural boundary. Moreover, the constituency of Morse surrounds the City of Swift Current. If satellite villages should develop outside the City of Swift Current, as some people have suggested, the voter population will increase accordingly.

The recommendations made in this Final Report go some distance in reducing voter population in the constituency of Humboldt. The Commission feels that this constituency has reached its optimum population. It is also of the opinion that eventually the central and park area of the province will experience to some extent, the same changes that have occurred in the prairie areas. With the increased use of large equipment, it is likely that farms in that area of Saskatchewan will become larger with consequent loss of population in the future.

Conclusion

In concluding, the Commission desires to make it quite clear that in the recommendations and proposals it has made, it has been governed by the principles set out in the Act. In reviewing the voter population in the proposed urban constituencies, sight must not be lost of the fact that the Commission had to determine the voter population of each proposed constituency within the total voter population of the city within its boundaries. It is for this reason that the average voter population of the proposed constituencies in the urban areas will, on the whole, be somewhat higher than the average in rural areas. On the other hand, the Commission feels that it has achieved a reasonable degree of equality in the voter population of the proposed urban constituencies in their relationship to one another.

The following appendices are approved by the Commission and are made a part of this Final Report:

(1) Appendix (i): A list setting out the names and voter population and the variation from the constituency population quotient for each of the 66 proposed constituencies;

(2) Appendix (ii): The rules applying to descriptions of proposed constituencies and the legal description of each of the proposed constituencies as finalized in this Final Report;

(3) Appendix (iii): This is a copy of the Commission's prelude to its Interim Report; and

(4) Appendix (iv): This consists of five maps showing the boundaries of 66 constituencies as set out in Appendix (ii).

RULES APPLYING TO DESCRIPTIONS OF PROPOSED CONSTITUENCIES and LEGAL DESCRIPTION OF EACH OF THE PROPOSED CONSTITUENCIES AS FINALIZED IN THIS FINAL REPORT

1. In the following descriptions where "meridians" and "boundaries or townships" or "boundaries of sections" are referred to as the boundaries of constituencies, these expressions mean the meridians, boundaries of townships or boundaries of sections, as the case may be, in accordance with the Saskatchewan land system of surveys and include the extensions thereof in accordance with that system.

2. Where a dividing line between two ranges is mentioned as the boundary of a constituency, the expression means the surveyed line on the east boundary of the west range and the extension of that line southerly to intersect the north boundary of each township that lies to the south of a correction line and thence easterly along the north boundary of such township to the east boundary thereof.

3. Where the north boundary of a township is mentioned as the boundary of a constituency and a jog exists between the north boundaries of a township on either side of a dividing line, the expression means that the boundary of the constituency follows along the portion of the dividing line that extends between the respective north boundaries of the township.

4. Where boundaries of sections are mentioned as the boundary of a constituency and a correction line or jog exists between two section boundaries described, the expression means that the boundary of the constituency follows along the portion of the north boundary of a township or dividing line that extends between the respective section boundaries described.

5. Where the left bank of any stream or lake is mentioned as the boundary of a constituency, the expression means the bank of that stream or lake on the left side of a person going in the direction in which the water flows.

6. Where in the following descriptions reference is made to "meridian", "township" or "range" and the meridian, township or range lies outside the portion of the province subdivided in accordance with the provisions of The Land Surveys Act, the reference is taken to be in accordance with the projection of the meridian, township or range as defined in the Act.

7. When a constituency boundary cuts through a hamlet, village or town, and that hamlet, village or town has not been specifically mentioned in the constituency description, the boundary is to include the area of lesser population as lying within the constituency in which the part with the greater population lies.

8. Where reference in descriptions of boundaries is made to limits or incorporated limits of any village, town or city, the reference means those limits as defined as of July 1, 1988.

ARM RIVER

The constituency of Arm River is bounded as follows: Commencing at the intersection of the north boundary of township thirty with the dividing line between ranges twenty-five and twenty-six, west of the second meridian; thence westerly along the north boundary of township thirty to the third meridian; thence northerly along the third meridian to the north boundary of township thirty-four; thence westerly along the north boundary of township thirty-four to the intersection with the left bank of the South Saskatchewan River; thence southerly along the left bank of the South Saskatchewan River and continuing south along the west limit of the full supply level of the reservoir known as Lake Diefenbaker to the north boundary of township twenty-four; thence easterly along the north boundary of township twenty-four to the east limit of the full supply level of the reservoir known as Lake Diefenbaker; thence south-easterly and southerly along the full supply level of the reservoir known as Lake Diefenbaker to the centre line of the conduit outlet on the south end of the Qu'Appelle Dam; thence south-easterly along the said centre line of the conduit outlet and the centre line of the canal between the Qu'Appelle Dam and the left bank of the Qu'Appelle River and the north-eastern bank of Eyebrow Lake and Buffalo Pound Lake, respectively, to the intersection with the dividing line between ranges twenty-six and twenty-seven, west of the second meridian; thence northerly along the said dividing line between ranges twenty-six and twenty-seven to the north boundary of township twenty-one, thence easterly along the north boundary of township twenty-one to the intersection with the east bank of Last Mountain Lake; thence northerly along the east bank of Last Mountain Lake to the intersection with the dividing line between ranges twenty-three and twenty-four, in township twenty-eight, west of the second meridian; thence northerly along the said dividing line between ranges twenty-three and twenty-four to the north boundary of township twenty-nine; thence westerly along the north boundary of township twenty-nine to the dividing line between ranges twenty-five and twenty-six, west of the second meridian; thence northerly along the said dividing line between ranges twenty-five and twenty-six to the point of commencement.

ASSINIBOIA-GRAVELBOURG

The constituency of Assiniboia-Gravelbourg is bounded as follows: Commencing at the intersection of the south boundary of the province with the dividing line between ranges five and six, west of the third meridian; thence northerly along the said dividing line between ranges five and six to the north boundary of township nine; thence westerly along said north boundary to the dividing line between ranges six and seven; thence northerly along the said dividing line between ranges six and seven to the north boundary of township twelve; thence easterly along the said north boundary of township twelve to the dividing line between ranges twenty-seven and twenty-eight, west of the second meridian; thence southerly along the said dividing line between ranges twenty-seven and twenty-eight to the north boundary of township ten; thence westerly along the said north boundary of township ten to the northeast corner of section thirty-four in the said township ten; thence southerly along the east boundary of the said section thirty-four and its production southerly to the east bank of Lake of the Rivers; thence continuing southerly along the said easterly bank of Lake of the Rivers to the north boundary of township nine; thence easterly along said north boundary of township nine to the dividing line between ranges twenty-seven and twenty-eight; thence southerly along the said dividing line between ranges twenty-seven and twenty-eight to the intersection with the south bank of Willow Bunch Lake; thence south-easterly and northerly along the south bank of Willow Bunch Lake to intersection with the north boundary of section nine, in township five, in range twenty-five; thence easterly along the north boundary of section nine, ten, eleven and twelve in the said township five to the dividing line between ranges twenty-four and twenty-five; thence southerly along the said dividing line between ranges twenty-four and twenty-five to the south boundary of the province; thence westerly along the said south boundary of the province to the point of commencement.

ATHABASCA

INTERIM REPORT: AUGUST 1988

Pursuant to The Electoral Boundaries Commission Act, 1986-87, C.E.-6.1, the Lieutenant Governor did on January 31, 1988, issue a proclamation establishing the Electoral Boundaries Commission and appointed as members thereof:

Hon. E. M. Culliton, C.C., Q.C., retired Chief Justice of Saskatchewan and the Court of Appeal:

His Honour Judge R. H. Allan, a Judge of the Provincial Court of Saskatchewan;

Keith Lampard, Esq., Chief Electoral Officer, appointed to that position pursuant to The Elections Act.

The Commission at its first meeting, appointed the Honourable E. M. Culliton Chairman; Judge R. H. Allan Vice Chairman; Dr. John H. Archer, O.C., President Emeritus, University of Regina, Secretary; and Miss Frances M. Prince Clerk-Stenographer.

Under the Act, there is a mandatory requirement that the Commission propose 66 constituencies categorized as follows:

(a) 2 Northern;

(b) 29 Urban; and

(c) 35 Rural.

The dividing line which divides the Province into northern and southern areas and which is the south boundary of the two northern constituencies which the Commission is required to propose, is the same as that which prevailed in the legislation under which the constituency boundaries as they are now, were determined.

The Act further directs that the 29 urban constituencies be proposed as follows:

(a) the city of Swift Current, the city of North Battleford and the town of Battleford, and the city of Yorkton, shall each be one urban constituency;

(b) the cities of Prince Albert and Moose Jaw shall each be 2 urban constituencies; and

(c) the cities of Regina and Saskatoon shall each contain 11 urban constituencies.

The Act then provides that the boundaries of each of the proposed urban constituencies shall not extend beyond the municipal boundaries of the urban municipalities of which it is composed.

In respect to the 35 rural constituencies to be proposed, the Act states that the areas of Saskatchewan lying south of the dividing line that are not included in proposed urban constituencies shall be included in the proposed 35 rural constituencies.

Because of the establishment of the foregoing categories of constituencies, the Commission sought from the Attorney General an interpretation of those sections of the Act relating to the determination of a constituency population quotient — whether there would be three different quotients or one quotient applicable to all proposed constituencies. In a letter from the Deputy Attorney General, the Commission was advised "one constituency population quotient shall be determined for Saskatchewan."

Following that advice, the constituency population quotient is to be determined by dividing the total voter population of the Province, as recorded in the revised voters' list for the 1986 provincial general election by the total number of proposed constituencies, namely 66. When this is done, the constituency population quotient is determined at 10,147 and is applicable to all constituencies subject to statutory right in particular circumstances to depart therefrom.

The Legislature recognized that there are many factors which may justify departure from the norm, either up or down. It therefore provided in the Act there may be a variation of 25%, either up or down, in southern constituencies and a variation of 50%, either up or down, in northern constituencies. The discretion to depart from the norm is given to the Commission to accommodate particular factors such as sparcity, density or relative growth of population, geographical factors, means of communication, the community or diversity of interest of the population and any other similar or relevant factors. Thus, in the exercise of this discretionary right, in all constituencies except the northern constituency, the upper parameter will be 12,684 and the lower parameter 7,610. For the two northern constituencies, the upper parameter would be 15,221 and the lower 5,074.

The Commission first made a review of all constituencies to ascertain whether there had been any shifting or changing populations that would require changes in the constituency boundaries. A careful review of the northern areas indicated there had been only a marginal change in voter population. In the constituency of Athabasca there was a decrease of 83 in the voter population and in Cumberland, an increase of 278. As the southern boundary is not being changed, the Commission was satisfied that there were no factors to justify any change in the boundaries of the two northern constituencies.

A careful review of all of the rural constituencies again revealed neither any substantial change in voter population nor any other factors that would justify a general revision of the constituency boundaries. To make wide-spread changes in the boundaries of the present constituencies would be making a change only for the sake of change and not for the purpose of improving legislative representation. If it were not for the fact that the requirement for all urban constituencies to be within the municipal boundaries of the urban centres related thereto, there would be no justifiable reason to disturb the boundaries of the rural constituencies as they now exist.

Before proposing the urban constituencies as required by the Act, the Commission wrote to the Planning Department of each of the urban municipalities requesting a map showing the boundaries of the urban municipality as they are or would be on July 1, 1988, the areas of growth already sanctioned, and growth projection for the immediate future. Every municipality replied to this request and the information obtained was of particular assistance to the Commission in determining the proper voter population in proposed constituencies in which a growth project has been sanctioned or which was planned for development within the near future.

In the constituency of Prince Albert-Duck Lake, there are 16 polls containing 3,350 voters outside the municipal boundaries of the city that must find rest in adjoining rural constituencies. In Shellbrook-Torch River, there are 668 in the same position. To solve this problem, the Commission recommends that the boundaries of the constituencies of Redberry, Rosthern, Biggar, Shellbrook-Torch River, and Humboldt be altered as set out in the new description of the boundaries of those constituencies.

In the city of Yorkton, there are 4 polls containing 829 voters outside the municipal boundaries of the city. Giving full effect to the geographical and ethnical factors, the Commission recommends that the boundaries of the constituency of Canora be altered to encompass these polls.

The provisions of the Act dictate that the urban centres of Regina and Saskatoon shall each have 11 constituencies. This increase of one constituency for each centre was bound to affect the boundaries of most if not all constituencies within the said centre, if the terms of the Act bearing on the electoral quotient were to be observed, and if provision were to be made for growth and development since 1986 and projected for the immediate future. In all circumstances where changes were made, the Commission sought to have new boundaries conform to community interests. Great care was taken to ensure that boundaries followed well defined, natural routes. Care was also taken to keep intact as many constituencies as possible, making changes only when legal requirements and considered judgment dictated change. The proposed 22 constituencies set out for Regina and Saskatoon have been drawn up following the above principles.

The Commission is satisfied that its decision to alter the boundaries of the proposed rural constituencies only to the extent necessary to meet the mandatory requirements of the Act, is sound. It is significant that in the report of the Constituency Boundaries Commission of 1980, the constituency population quotient was 9,507 whereas the Commission this year found that quotient to be 10,147, or an increase of 640 voters. An analytical review of the population trend in the Province evidences that the increase in quotient is due almost entirely to the increased population of Regina and Saskatoon. That increase is being provided for by the proposal that there be two extra constituencies: one in each urban centre. Such a conclusion as well, emphasizes the fact that there has been no important change in the voter population of the proposed rural constituencies to require or justify any general change of the boundaries except those recommended.

The Commission proposes that there be 66 constituencies in Saskatchewan, consisting of 2 northern constituencies, 29 urban and 35 rural constituencies as set out in the map attached hereto and which are geographically described and named in the schedule thereto.
